

Understanding German Language Levels

A quick guide to A1, A2, B1 and B2 on the CEFR scale

Understanding German language levels is important before starting your learning journey. Each level represents a specific stage of proficiency.

The CEFR framework

The German language follows the CEFR framework, divided here into four learning stages:

A1 BEGINNER	A2 ELEMENTARY
Focuses on basic communication and everyday expressions.	Helps learners form complete sentences and handle common situations.
B1 INTERMEDIATE	B2 UPPER INTERMEDIATE
Enables independent communication in academic and professional contexts.	Represents advanced proficiency, required by many universities and employers.

Choosing the right level ensures effective learning and faster progress. Structured courses help students move confidently from beginner to advanced stages.
